

Fluctuating business climate has given rise to testing needs that are fractional in nature. Rapid technological advancements, sporadic demand patterns and evolving industry dynamics constantly urge organizations for a faster response time to market. This requires building new testing capacities and capabilities for validating applications that run on a plethora of new platforms, such as mobile and virtual environments. Validating functional and non-functional aspects of these applications on a wide range of infrastructure requires a variety of tools which further makes testing more complex, notably expensive and eminently lagging on the timeline.

Alternate delivery models such as 'Testing-As-A-Service' (TaaS) address this gap, complementing the needs of the traditional testing models. A platform based service delivery model, TaaS can help business equip for these challenges more effectively and methodically.

Fastest gives you instant access to Cognizant's best-in-class testing wherever, whenever and only as long as you need it!

Fastest is Cognizant's cloud based on demand software testing service. Businesses can now test their applications leveraging 'fastest' to reduce their total cost of ownership and swiftly scale to meet volatile demands and without having to invest in tools and infrastructure.

How fastest works?

It begins with a platform based e-commerce experience where you register and browse through our catalogue of services to place a service request. It is as simple as ordering your favorite book online.

Once a service request is initiated in the platform, our intuitive pricing engine provides an instant quote and within 72 hours, we will compute your requirement to get started. You will be assigned a dedicated service line manager to guide you through the complete request life cycle.

At the click of "submit" button, we will source the right specialists, provision tools and infrastructure instantaneously to begin the execution. A real time dashboard will constantly be updating you on the performance and test results.
